FINELT PICNIC OF THE SEASON

Judge Bell Delivers Address—Prizes Were Won by the Young Folks in Several Contests—Fat Man's Race Won by One of the Town's Prominent Citizens.

The local aerie of Eagles could not have wished for a finer day for their picnic at the Driving park than they had yesterday. The weather was favorable to an event of the kind, and the park was well filled with Eagles and their friends. Everybody had a most enjoyable time.

There were amusements of all kinds. The contests were exciting and the music by the High School band was exhilarating.

In the motorcycle race John P. Smith won first prize, with Ralph Jordan a close second and Francis Thompson third.

About forty little boys engaged in the peanut race, and the spectacle was one that brought forth the hearty laughs of the crowd.

The address of Judge Singleton Bell in the afternoon, was a very able effort. The judge spoke of fraternal organizations and said that through these the people of a town were brought into closer relations, and that when properly conducted, as the Eagles are, an order was beneficial to any community. Burgess Callan introduced Judge Bell, and the latter was listened to with marked attention by the picnicers.

James S. Merritt Accused of Setting Fire to His Restaurant in Woodland on the Night of July 18th

Merritt Was Alleged to Have Returned to His Place of Business Before Starting to the Railroad Station, from Which he Took a Train to Clearfield—Fire broke Out Soon After He Had Reached the Station—Only One Side of Case Heard—Case Will be Heard at September Sessions.

A preliminary hearing of the case of the commonwealth vs. James S. Merritt, of Clearfield, was had before Squire Chorpening, at his office in Clearfield this morning. Mr. Merritt is charged with having set fire to his restaurant in Woodland on the night of July 18 in order, it is alleged, to obtain the insurance money.

The first witness called was Paul Shirey, of Woodland, a blacksmith, who testified that he heard a stranger at the station mention the fact that there was a light in the rear part of the restaurant, but he did not think it was unusual. Then the train coming in shut off the view. Mr. Shirey had left the station and gone to the company store when he heard the fire whistle.

Returned to the Store.
Lloyd Luzier testified that he left Merritt's restaurant with Merritt, who was coming to his home in Clearfield, and that they were the last persons to be in the restaurant, two other boys going out ahead of them.

LONG STRIKE AT CRESSON IS ENDED BY THE PENNSY

Cresson Strike Ended.

Cresson people breathed a sigh of relief Tuesday when the Pennsylvania railroad hauled out of the yards at that place the two big cars which for almost a half year have served as headquarters for strikebreakers. The action of the Pennsy is taken to mean that the strike of the trackmen is at an end. Reports are that the company has decided to hire some of the men who were among the strikers when the outbreak occurred early in the year.

Although there had been no serious trouble, the sight of the strike breakers' cars caused an air of dissatisfaction among the employees at Cresson. When the strike broke out the company sent a large force of workmen to Cresson to do the work of the men who had left their jobs.

The two big cars had been equipped with bunks, cook stoves and other things and with big stores of food.

The Pennsy has been quietly and gradually withdrawing these strike breakers and has been engaging new workmen.

Telephoning On Trains.

In the recent test of the Erie's gigantic centipede locomotive, the Matt H. Shay, it was necessary to make use of the telephone to get the train properly started, the weight exclusive of the locomotive being 17,912 tons. To avoid the pulling out of drawbars in starting, pushing locomotives were used to assist the train in getting under way. The total length of the train was 8,500 feet, or about 1.6 miles. Telephonic communication was maintained between the front and rear ends of the train to coordinate the efforts of the pushing locomotives in starting. For length and weight of the train the test establishes a world's record. The average drawbar pull for the run was about 100,000 pounds.

Electrification is Halted.

Work has been stopped on the electrification work of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, near Butte, Mont., because of demands of labor. It is said to be a question if the work will resume at an early date at the workers demanded five dollars for a day of eight hours and there was raised the question of the right of the electrical workers to set poles for the transportation lines. The railway company refused to treat with labor organizations not actually in the employ of the company. Considerable progress had been made with the electrification of the first unit.

NOSE AND HEAD STOPPED UP FROM COLD OR CATARRH, OPEN AT ONCE

Dull Headache Goes.
Sore Nasty Catarrhal Discharges.
Iv Close Nose, Head and Throat—
My Cleansing, Healing Balm Instantly—
Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now. Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane, which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Coming Changes in Hairdressing Styles

HAIR brims are growing wider and modistes foretell a vogue for large hats, to begin with the fall season. Large hats and small, simple coiffures do not harmonize, and already the light puff for flaring out the coiffure has made its appearance. We have also to consider small hair rolls or pads for supporting the hair, and coiffures are quite generally dressed in waves. These are the wavelets that are breaking upon a new shore-line in hairdressing, speaking figuratively; they are foretelling a rising tide of favor for more display in the management of the hair. The coiffure shown here pictures the hair parted at one side and waved in smooth, regular undulations. There is a short curl at the front arranged in a light curl. Some of the new styles show two very precise ringlets, one on each side of a middle part. For this style the hair is also waved, but more loosely, and the coil is arranged lower on the neck.

Long, light puffs help out in building up a coiffure and a few of them, arranged about a coil, make the new styles easy to accomplish. The coiffure arranged on top of the head, with the hair combed back from the face is liked by the younger women. Only a few curls about the face relieve the plainness of this style, but a mass of hair piled on top of the head makes a piquant arrangement suited to youthful faces.

Puffs and short curls are becoming to everyone and look as well on grand-mama as on her daughter and daughter's daughter. They are most successful when made separately and planned on, for they can be easily dressed and placed wherever needed. There is no very good reason why one should not borrow the charm that belongs to them unless a prejudice against wearing separate pieces of hair can be construed as reasonable.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Washable Tango Girdles.

Have you seen the new washable tango girdles? They are made of mercerized poplin, embroidered in white or colors, if preferred. They are passed twice around the waist and finished with two embroidered ends which hang at the side.

Peacock feathers are now being gilded before they are poised on hats of gold or blue hemp.

UMPIRE BAITING HAS NOT BEEN STOPPED BY PLAYERS

BY FRANG G. MENKE.
(By International News Service.)

New York, Aug. 14.—Chris Mathewson, the author pitcher, in a recent article stating this was an easy year for umpires, remarked that even his boss, John McGraw, was "off" the arbitrators this year, and that John was acting real polite and refined in his attitude toward the umpires.

Quite a number of persons will be surprised to hear this. Among those will be one John McGraw, sometimes called "Muggsy" McGraw and at other times "Hit-from-behind" McGraw. Some National league umpires will be surprised, too. To the best of their recollection, they have had to chase John from the pastime just about as often this year as ever before. And that means they've done some considerable chasing.

Perhaps what Chris meant to impart to the multitude was that John doesn't say as much to the umpires as he used to say in the dear old days that are dead. There may be some truth in that. The umpires in late years have come to know John. Just as soon as they declare a Giant out or the other fellow safe, they look toward John. If they notice that he is about to open his mouth they can anticipate what is coming—to them. So they just wave John from the pasture and thus save their feelings from injury by the harsh, cruel words that John can concoct at a moment's notice.

If the article that Chris wrote merely mentioned John's name as a party who no longer heckles the umpires one might have gained the idea that Chris wrote that article just to get a stand in with his boss. But Chris didn't stop with lauding John as a reformed umpire-baiter. He mentioned the names of Clarke Griffith, the peppery leader of the Senators and Frank Chance, the Yankee manager. He declared that "like McGraw," they no longer cause trouble for the umpires.

Griff is "off" the umpires—when police are around. At other times—well, read the dispatches from the different towns where the Senators stage their ball games—and where Griff stages his little act: "taming the Umpire."

It wasn't so very long ago that Griff showed how thoroughly he has his temper under control by forfeiting game in Philadelphia because he objected to some of the rulings by an Umpire named Chilli. And it wasn't so long ago that Griff and almost his entire team got mixed up in a few doings in Detroit. It was, so very long ago that Connie Mack, the peacable Quaker City resident declared that because of Griffith's actions on a ball field and his conduct toward umpires that "Griffith ought to be driven out of baseball."

As to Frank Chance, Chris may be partially right. Whether Chance has reformed is a question. But it's true that he hasn't been shooed off the field as often as he used to be. Among some of the reasons for this are that he hasn't been on the field as regularly as in the old days and that he's now leading a way down second division club. The Yanks, when they get their beatings, usually get such decisive ones that there is no question about it—and little chance to blame it on the umpire. An umpire can be blamed for many things but you can't blame him because the other fellow coaxed out a triple with the bases loaded. You can't blame him when your fielder muffs a fly ball, nor can you blame him when your club fails to hit or fails to field and your pitchers fail to pitch.

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

But of course, you can blame the umpire once in a while. When chance presents itself Chance presents himself and diligently pursues the business of blaming the umpire. Added years haven't taken the sting from his speech, and that's one of the reasons why Chance, in ratio to protests, has been chased just as often this year as he was in the old Cub days.

Good evening! Well, if you don't get that trip to Europe you probably have a receipted bill from your grocer.

It's a wise man who can get away with some other fellow's umbrella without being detected.

If the pumpkin does not hurry up it will be in no condition to withstand the visitation of Jack Frost.

Ridicule has worked many reforms in man's habits, but ridicule has no effect on the cigarette smoker.

Those improvement bonds offered by the borough might sell like hot corn on the cob if they were disguised as gold mine stock.

A true Christian is a man who does not swear when he strikes at an exasperating fly and upssets the ink bottle over his manuscript.

No, Genevieve; the triple entente is not a new French dance, as you suppose, but a combination of European powers who are making Madame Europe do the dancing.

Somebody who has time might figure out how much the state and county will eventually pay to prove or fail to prove that the deer killed by Dr. Dickinson had horns visible above the hair.

A "distinguished scientist" says the kaiser is not responsible for plunging seven nations of Europe in war. But history will record that if the kaiser had not been hot for war there would be peace in Europe today.

INVASION OF PENNSYLVANIA.
So long has Special Privilege been entrenched in Pennsylvania that it regards its position as impregnable. Having entered into an alliance with the Republican and Democratic parties Special Privilege has gradually but surely deprived the people of their right to self-government; has fattened on the spoils of office, and has sought to make perpetual its power to oppress the people. This triple alliance is about to be ousted from power, and the people will again come into their own.

Insolent and arrogant as the triple alliance is it fears those who speak the truth. In past years the triple alliance has been able to allay the suspicions of the people by pretending to be fair and honest. But the founding of the Washington party and the dissemination of facts and figures proving that the triple alliance has robbed the people of their money and their rights have caused the component parts of the alliance to realize that it can no longer fool the people.

Strongly entrenched as it is, Special Privilege—the Penrose machine, the Democratic machine and the beneficiaries of the activities of these two machines—dreads the invasion of Pennsylvania by Colonel Roosevelt, the leader of the party of progressivism, honest government and social and industrial justice. Colonel Roosevelt is coming into this state for the purpose of bombarding the triple alliance with the truth, and the hot shot he will pour into the ranks of the enemy will cause them to regard surrender as the wisest policy, especially as Colonel Roosevelt has an army of determined voters behind him, all of whom believe that it is time that the state is rid of its discredited political pirates.

PURE LAWLESSNESS.

The automobile as a means to pleasure or profit has come to stay. There are over one hundred thousand motor driven cars in Pennsylvania. Unfortunately some of these cars are owned and driven by people who have no more right to have such a dangerous machine in their control than a four-weeks' old baby. These are the people who disregard both the law and the rights of other people. These are the people who run down pedestrians—and then escape by running their cars at a high speed that their numbers cannot be taken. The person who runs their motor cars in defiance of law and common sense bring discredit upon the careful drivers. There are a few of these reckless, insolent motorists in Clearfield, and one of them Thursday afternoon ran into another car on Third street, near Pine, doing considerable damage to the other car. Instead of stopping to inquire into the case this careless driver proceed on the way as unconcerned as if running other people down were an every day occurrence.

It would be to the interest of all motorists if drivers such as this one were taken into court and punished for recklessness. But it would be much more beneficial to everybody if the legislature were to prohibit the running of motor cars by thoughtless persons of either sex. Those men and women who have no respect for the rights and property of others should not have placed in their control machines which at best are dangerous even in the hands of the most careful drivers. To run a motor car over a pedestrian or into another car and then put on speed and disappear should be made a crime punishable with a heavy fine and imprisonment.

Precious Relics

Discussing a popular novel of little worth a well-known critic says:
The pathos of the book is really pathetic. It reminds me of a widow

With many good thing for each city guest.

And one of them said as he tasted the peas:

"How deliciously sweet and good are these;

When fresh from the garden and out of the pod,

How much better they are, it's certainly odd."

And he didn't know 'twas the country air,

That gave those peas their flavor so rare.

When the farmer's wife heard his praise she grinned,

For the pod from which they came was tinned.

EAGLES HAVE FINE TIME AT THE PARK

Miss Barbara Mason won the first prize—a pair of gloves, in the waltz contest, and Gordon Brown got second prize—a watch fob in the same dance.

The fat man's race was won by W. H. Spencer, the Royal Quality flour man, who received a box of chocolates. The first prize in the little girls' foot race was won by Rebecca Dougherty and the second prize was won by Miss Margaret McDonald, and Francis Butler won the bicycle race. In the girls' egg race Rebecca Dougherty came in first and Margaret McDonald second.

A game of baseball was played by the East End All-Star team and the strong West Side team, the All-Stars winning by a score of 9 to 0. Despite the one-sided score, the game was a good one and was heartily enjoyed. The batteries were: East End, P. Roschery, Lester. West Side, Fauver, Fletcher, Pool and Campbell.

Hits—Off Fauver, 6 in two innings; off Pool, 7 in six innings; off Roschery, 3 in nine innings.

The ladies aid society had success with its dinner.

The Eagles wish to thank Father Ryan, of St. Francis church and the American Mechanics, for tables furnished at the picnic.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS ARE PROVING VERY POPULAR

The public playground was recently opened in Witmer park with 150 children present. Since then it has been well attended when the weather has been good. The apparatus has not yet arrived, but is expected to be here soon. Just now Misses Alta Boyce and Mildred Deitzel, the girls who have charge of the playground, are entertaining the children by teaching them games and telling stories. The play ground is open to all on every day except Sundays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Wednesday is girls' day. On this day they are taught to sew, using simple stitches. The girls are working on patches now, which will be used to make a quilt when they are all finished. Each Wednesday the little girl who makes the neatest stitches is given a small prize. Thursday is boys' day when sports which the boys like best are indulged in and base ball games played. Children from all parts of the town are extended a welcome to come and enjoy the good times that are in store for them every afternoon at the lower Witmer park.

The town council appropriated $150 to be used in buying apparatus and the best judgment of those who had the matter in charge has been used in choosing it. When this apparatus arrives the playground will be even more interesting than it is now. For what child does not love a swing, or a sliding board?

The Woman's club has been very fortunate in securing Miss Boyce and Miss Deitzer to take charge of the playground.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy of any drug store the ready-made tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Restorer". You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking only small strands at a time. By continuing all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and lustrous. You will still discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray faded hair though no longer a sign of old age, and so we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

BELGIANS ELATED BY THEIR VICTORY

Suffered Serious Setbacks.

Large German forces, vanguards on the right flank of the 1,000,000 men army the kaiser has lined up for nearly 200 miles in battle formation, in Belgium and Luxembourg, suffered serious setbacks Wednesday and yesterday at the hands of the Belgians, according to official announcement last night.

German troops from the Liege district Wednesday moved on Haelen, a town four miles southeast of Driest, but were driven back with heavy losses.

Belgians Took Defensive. Yesterday the Belgians, assuming the offensive, started after the retreating Germans, and advices last night indicate that the rout of the enemy's division is complete.

An official communication yesterday also said that a large German force, proceeding in the direction of Eghezee to the north of Namur, the fortified city, was attacked and repulsed yesterday morning by the Belgian troops. The Germans suffered severe casualties. The Belgians captured machine guns mounted on motorcars.

Not in Contact With Allies.

No mention is made of the participation of French and British forces in yesterday's battles, from which it would appear that the Germans have not yet come in contact with the main allied army of defense, supposed to be gathering at Namur. The tactics of the Germans indicate they are trying to get into contact with the allied army, the position of which is hidden.

Commenting on yesterday's movements, the war ministry says: "The Belgian cavalry division this morning took up the offensive against the Germans, who were defeated in yesterday's battle of Haelen, with the object, it is believed, of picking up the dead and wounded and collecting the abandoned material of war."

"No German surprise was expected, and there are no reasons to fear and German cavalry movement on Brussels from the south, all roads leading to the capital being guarded by the Belgian army and the civic guard."

Germans Outnumbered Belgians

Germans engaged in the battle of Haelen according to late details received here, numbered more than 10,000, composed of cavalry, artillery and a small force of infantry. The Belgian force numbered about 7000.

"It is believed," says the dispatch from the front, "that the object of the Germans was to take a position north of the Et. Trond road at Tirlemont, from which they would be able to execute a turning movement on the Belgian army."

"Through efficient cavalry reconnaissance, the Belgian commander obtained accurate information of the movement of the attacking force. To reach Diest the Germans had to cross the river at Haelen, and it was before this place that the Belgians took up their principal position, erecting baricades, building entrenchment and placing guns where they could be most effectively employed."

German Fire Had Little Effect.

"The Germans came in sight about 11 o'clock in the morning, and soon after that the artillery on both sides came into action. The German fire had little effect. The Belgian fire was deadly, even at a range of 2000 meters, and played havoc with the German cavalry, which, notwithstanding, continued to advance."

The Belgian cavalry repeatedly charged, but owing to the conformation of the country, which is intersected with hedges and hillocks, could attack only in small groups. The Germans again and again hurled themselves at the baricades, only to be shot down by the deadly Belgian fire.

German Defeat Was Complete.

The attack on the bridges spanning the river was equally fierce. German officers could be seen urging their men to the attack, to meet almost certain death from the Belgian guns. Men and horses fell like flies, until, when almost shattered, the order for retreat was given at 6 o'clock in the evening.

The German defeat was complete, their loss reaching more than 1000, and they retired in the greatest disorder. At nightfall they were making their way hastily towards Tongres.

Many Germans Were Killed.

Upwards of 200 dead German soldiers were counted in a space of fifty yards square. A church, a brewery and some houses in Haelen were set afire and two bridges over the Demer were destroyed by Belgian engineers. Great quantities of booty were collected on the battlefield and this has been stacked in front of the town hall of Diest. Many horses also were captured.

The German troops in other parts of Belgium are understood to be gathering in all the railroad cars they can find. A passenger train near Warminnes was halted by a German cavalry patrol and the passengers left in the open country, the train, with its engineer, being taken toward the German lines.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST CITIZEN

When they had gone 30 feet Mr. Merritt said that he must go back for some peanuts, and he went back, the others going on toward the station. Luzier picked up Merritt's suitcase when Merritt returned to the restaurant. Merritt was gone only a few minutes, but when he returned Mr. Luzier could not see that he had any peanuts. Mr. Merritt and Mr. Luzier got on the train and they heard the fire whistle blow about three minutes after the train started. Mr. Luzier testified that he had noticed no light before the train left.

Rooms Were Ablaze.

Harvey Barger, of Woodland, who is also a restaurant keeper, was the next witness. Very soon after the train left some one gave the fire alarm. He followed and saw that Merritt's restaurant was afire. He took a sign board and broke open the front door, which was locked. He saw that the flames were shooting up over a partition that divided the front part of the restaurant from the part where the cooking was done. Without stopping to investigate, Mr. Barger went out and got two buckets and filled them at the nearby pump. By the time he came back the fire had spread so rapidly that he could not throw the water on the base of the fire, and the room was so filled with the darting flames that he could not enter.

Mr. Barger's residence was about eight feet from the restaurant, on one side, although the outside stairs of his house were only three feet from the restaurant.

Mr. Merritt Returned.

A. D. 1914, also a resident of Woodland, was next called to the stand. Mr. McClure, a neighbor, first notified him of the fire in Mr. Merritt's restaurant directly opposite his home, just after the train had pulled out for Clearfield. He called the lower works and told them and had the fire alarm blown, then he took out his car and some things from the front of his own house, but did not go over to Mr. Merritt's restaurant. The fire spread so rapidly that Mr. Powell's household had to leave the house by the back way.

Mr. Powell testified that he saw Mr. Merritt leave the store with the boys and then come back for a few minutes but he did not notice any light in the store until he was called. The restaurant was lighted by electric light, but Mr. Merritt did not turn it on when he went back to the store.

His Wife Smelled Fire.

C. C. McClure, the shipping clerk at the Woodland brick works, testified that he lived in the house next to the restaurant; that he was sleeping when he was awakened by the nurse and told that his wife who was sick in bed, had smelled fire. He went down and saw where the fire was and got water to pour on it. When the water was poured on the fire, it suddenly spread over the ceiling. The fire was coming from behind the partition and the flame was blue. Mr. McClure stated that Mr. Merritt knew the serious condition of his wife. He then went back to his wife assured her that there was no cause for alarm, but as the fire spread so rapidly they carried her out of the house. In a few minutes after the fire started the restaurant was in a blaze.

Lloyd Luzier was recalled and testified that it was no more than ten minutes from the time they left the restaurant until the fire whistle blew.

Was Building Another House.

Alex Dugan, of Woodland, testified that he owned the building occupied by Mr. Merritt as a restaurant, and that Merritt had leased it for a year. Mr. Dugan could not state, but he thought that the year was almost over. Mr. Merritt had laid the foundations for a building nearer the station, but had remarked a few days before that he believed he would have to close up the work until spring as he could not finance it now because he could not collect some money he had out. He also said that he would be willing to pay good interest on money if he could borrow but he did not ask to borrow it of Mr. Dugan.

Brief arguments for and against the accused were heard and was placed in the custody of the sheriff. Bail may be procured for his release until the September term of court.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

(Copyright by Harold MacGrath)

Kathlyn gazed sadly at her father. Treasure, treasure, that first she was beginning to hate the very sound of the word. The colonel had been nervous, impatient, and irritable ever since the document had been discovered. Till recently Kathlyn had always believed her father to be perfect, but now she saw that he was human, he had his flaws and spot. Treasure! Before her or Winnie! So be it.

"Colonel," said Bruce, taking a chance throw, "we are less than a hundred miles from the seaport. Suppose we let Umballa clear out and we ourselves head straight up the coast? It is not fair to the women to put them to any further hardship."

"Bruce, I have sworn to God that Umballa shall not have that treasure. Ramabal, do you understand what it will mean to you if he succeeds in reaching Allaha with that treasure, probably millions? He will be able to buy every priest and soldier in Allaha and still have enough left for any extravagance that he may wish to plunge in."

"Sahib," suggested Ramabal, "let us send the women to the seaport in care of Ahmed, while we men seek Umballa."

"Good!" Bruce struck his hands together. "The very thing."

"I refuse to be separated from father," declared Kathlyn. "If he is determined to pursue Umballa back to Allaha, I must accompany him."

"And I!" added Winnie.

"Nothing more to be said," and Bruce signed to the boatmen to start. "If only this breeze had not come up! We could have caught him before he made shore."

Umballa paced the deck of the sloop thinking and planning. He saw his enemies leaving in the rescued boats. Had he delayed them long enough? As matters stood, he could not carry away the treasure. He must have help. An armed force of men he could trust. On the mainland were Ahmed and the loyal keepers behind were three men who wanted his life as he wanted theirs. The only hope he had lay in the cupidity of the men on the sloop. If they could be made to stand by him, there was a fair chance. Once he was of a mind to leave the basket over the rail and trust to luck in finding it again. But the thought tore at his heart. He simply could not do it. Perhaps he could start a revolt, or win over the chief of the village. He had known honest men to fall at the sight of gold, to fight for it to commit any crime for it—and, if need be, to die for it. But the chief was with his enemies. Finally he came to the conclusion that the only thing to be done was to carry the treasure directly into the chief's hut and there await him. He would bribe the men with him sufficiently to close their mouths. He would wait on the shore the game was up. But he swept the mainland with his gaze and discovered no sign of him.

As a matter of fact, Ahmed had arranged his elephants so that they could start at once up the coast to the seaport. He was waiting on the native highway for the return of his master quite confident that he would bring the bothersome trinkets with him. He knew nothing of Umballa's exploit. The appalling thunder of the explosions worried him. He would wait for just so long then he would go and seek.

"Where Have You Hidden It?" Demanded the Chief.

start at once up the coast to the seaport. He was waiting on the native highway for the return of his master quite confident that he would bring the bothersome trinkets with him. He knew nothing of Umballa's exploit. The appalling thunder of the explosions worried him. He would wait for just so long then he would go and seek.

Every village chief has his successor in hope. This individual was one of those who had helped Umballa to carry the treasure from the cave in fact the man who had guided him to the cave itself. He spoke to Umballa. He said that he understood the holy ones' plight for to these yet simple and village folk Umballa was still the holiest one. Their religion was the same.

Umballa, he said, "we can beat your enemies who follow."

"How," eagerly.

"Yonder is the chief's bullock cart. I myself will find the bullocks."

"What then?"

"We shall be on the way south before the others land."

"An extra handful of gold for you! Get the oars out! Let us hurry!"

"More, holy one, these men, will obey me."

"They shall all be well paid."

Umballa had reached the point where he could not plan without treachery. He proposed to carry the basket into the jungle somewhere, bury it and make way with every man who knew the secret. Then, at the proper time, he would return for it with a brave caravan his own men or those whose loyalty he could repurchase.

The landing was made, the basket conveyed to the bullock cart, which was emptied of its bait and leopard trap. The bullocks were brought out and harnessed—all this activity before the fishing boats had covered half the distance.

"I see light," murmured Umballa.

He tried to act coolly, but when he spoke his voice cracked and the blood in his throat high suffocated him.

"Sand, holy one!"

"Well, what of sand?"

"You can dig and cover up things in sand and no one can possibly tell. The sand tells nothing."

They drove the bullocks forward mercifully till they came to what Umballa considered a suitable spot. A pit was dug, but not before Umballa had taken from the basket enough gold to set the men wild. They were his. He smiled inwardly to think how easily they could have had all of it. They were still honest.

The sand was smoothed down over the basket. It would not have been possible for the human eye to discover the spot without a perfect range. Umballa drove down a broken stick directly over where the basket lay. He had beaten them; they would find nothing. Now to rid himself of these simple fools who trusted him.

The man who longed to become the chief's successor was then played upon by Umballa. To set the two factions at each other's throat, a perfect elimination. Umballa advised him to rouse his friends, a chief that the white people had taken the gold away from the holy man to whom it belonged as agent.

Thus in this peaceful fishermen's village began the game of gold and politics for the two are inseparable. Umballa in hiding watched the contest gleefully. He witnessed the rival approach his chief, saw the angry gestures exchanged and knew that dissension had begun. The men of the village clustered about.

Where have you hidden it? demanded the chief. It belongs to the sahib.

Hidden what?

The treasure you and the false holy one took from the forbidden cave.

False holy one?

Ay wretch! He is Durga Ram the man who murdered the king of Allaha.

The mutineer laughed and waved his hand toward the smoking ruins of the promontory.

Look for it there, he said, under mountains of rock and dirt and sand. Look for it there! And who is this white man who says the holy one is false?

"I say it you scoundrel!" cried the colonel advancing, but Bruce restrained him, saying that the situation was too important and sinister to trust to a hasty decision.

But the chief was just a little diplomatic, he uttered.

But the men hesitated.

That may be but just at present there seem to be more men standing back of him than back of our chief here. We have no way of getting a warning to Ahmed. Wait!

Jack I spoke the chief wrathfully, thou best!

Ah! thou has grown too fat with rule.

Ay! cried the men back of the mutinous one.

Sahib, said the chief, without losing any of his natural dignity, the man has betrayed me. I see the lust of gold in their eyes. Evil presage. But you have saved the life of my child and mine and I will throw my strength with you.

Father can't you see? asked Kathlyn.

See what?

The inevitable. It was in my heart all the way here that we should meet with disaster. There is yet time to leave here peacefully.

But her pleading fell upon the ears of a man who was treasure mad. He would not listen to reason. Ahmed could have told Kathlyn that the old king stood back of her father pushing.

He is dead, whispered Bruce, but what of it?

What would I do without you, John?

From down the beach the chief's little group came toddling to the group of excited men. She was clutching some thing in her hand. Her father took her by the arm and pulled her back to him. Kathlyn put her hand upon the child's head protectingly. The child gazed up shyly, opened her little hand and disclosed a yellow sovereign.

The argument between the chief and his mutinous followers went on.

"John," said Kathlyn, you speak the dialect. I can understand only a word here and there. But listen. Tell the chief that all we desire is to be permitted to depart in peace later," she added, significantly.

"What's up?"

"The child has a coin—a British sovereign—in her hand. She knows where Umballa has secreted the treasure. Since father cannot be budged from his purpose let us try deceit. You speak to the chief while I explain to father."

To the chief Bruce said, "The treasure is evidently lost. So after a short rest we shall return to our caravan and depart. We do not wish to be the cause of trouble between you and your people."

"But, sahib, they have the gold!"

"The false holy one doubtless gave them that before the explosion." Bruce laid hold of his arm in a friendly fashion, apparently, but in reality as a warning. All we want is a slight rest in your house. After that we shall proceed upon our journey."

The mutineers could offer no reasonable objections to this and signified that it was all one to them so long as the white people departed. They had caused enough damage by their appearance and it might be that it was through their agency that the promontory was all but destroyed. The fish would be driven away for weeks and what would the fierce gun runners say when they found out that their stores had gone up in flame and smoke? At all! What would they do but bet their own and their own for permanent loss to the tribe?

When these men came, answered the chief with a grin, I will deal with them. None of us has entered the cave. They know me for a man of truth. Perhaps you are right. He added to the mutineer, "There could not have been a treasure there and escape the sharp eyes of those Arabs. Go back to your homes. These white people will be my guests till they have rested and are ready to depart."

John, with the men dispersed and from him Kathlyn placed the coin in the other of his pockets. All into his pocket. They would be no fight as long as the price. The men indeed had hoped to come to actual warfare but they could not force war on their chief without some good cause. After all the sooner the white people were out of the way the better for all concerned.

Did the leader of this open mutiny have ulterior designs upon the treasure upon the life of Umballa? Perhaps. At any rate, events so shaped themselves as to nullify whatever plans he had formed in his gold-dazzled brain.

The colonel was tractable and fell in with Kathlyn's idea. It would have been nothing short of foolhardiness to have openly antagonized the rebellious men.

You have a plan, Kit, but what is it?"

I dare not tell you here. You are too excited. But I believe I can lead you to where Umballa has buried the basket. I feel that Umballa is watching every move we make. And I dare say he hoped—and even instigated—this mutiny to end in disaster for us. He is alone. So much we can rely upon. But if we try to meet him openly we shall lose. Patience for a little while. There, they are leaving us. They are grumbling but I do not believe that means anything serious.

Now then white people said the chief, come to my house. You are welcome there now and always. You have this day saved my life and that of my child. I am grateful."

Inside the hut Kathlyn drew the child toward her and gently pressed open the tightly-clutched fingers. She plucked the sovereign from the little pink palm and held it up. The child's father seized it wonderingly.

"Gold! They had to me! I knew it!"

Yes, said Bruce. They did find the treasure. They brought it here and buried it quickly. And we believe your little girl knows where. Question her."

It was not an easy matter. The child was naturally shy and the presence of all these white-skinned people struck her usually babbling tongue with a species of paralysis. But her father was patient, and word by word the secret was dragged out of her. She told of the stolen bullock cart of the digging in the sand, of the holy one.

In some manner they must lure Umballa from his retreat. It was finally agreed upon that they all return to the camp and steal back at once in a body. They would come sufficiently armed. Later the chief could pretend to be working with his child.

So while Umballa stole forth to his hiding place, reasonably, that his enemies had gone, Umballa got together his mutineers and made arrangements with them to help him carry away the treasure that night, the right-hand owner of the broken stick in the damp sand.

That night when Umballa and his men arrived, a hole in the sand greeted them. It was shaped like a mouth, opened in laughter.

IN THE MOVIES

TWO PLEASING PICTURES AT OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT

"Circle 17."

Herman Rawlinson and Anna Little are at their best in this thrilling story of Black hand methods. Plot and counterplot are unfolded, with a charming love story prevailing all.

Professor Bartoli has incurred the enmity of the society. With his daughter he flees to America. As they start to board the steamer, an agent of the society attacks Bartoli and would stab him, but for the timely interference of Capt. Rawdon, U. S. A. That is the beginning of a series of incidents strange, enthralling and interest-sustaining. It is young Captain Rawdon who, in America, interferes in the plan of the black handers and saves, at the risk of his own life in a terrible fight in a river boat-house, Bartoli's daughter from an awful death.

A year passes. Bartoli has established himself as a music teacher in New York, while Anna has a flower stand on the street. Capt. Rawdon, coming home on furlough to visit his mother and sister.

Reaching his home, Rawdon is welcomed by his family. His mother decides to give a musicale in honor of his homecoming, he shows Bartoli's card with the suggestion that the Italian supply the music. The mother agrees, writes a note, to which Rawdon adds a postscript inviting Anna to attend the musicale.

Bartoli receives the note and writes directions to his daughter to follow him to the Rawdons. He goes out and the Italian agent of Giuseppe Draga, leader of Circle 17, enters and changes the address on Bartoli's note.

In this manner Anna is taken by the society. Bartoli worries that she does not appear at Rawdon's and the Captain at last suggests they time they trace her to a dirty dive and after a hard fight kill the villain and rescue the dark-eyed heroine.

"Universal Boy" No. 2

Matty breaks into vaudeville. Yes, he does a many other amusing and extremely interesting things in the second release of the great Universal Boy series, shown this evening at the New opera house. Also he meets several people whose names are known in every corner of the civilized world.

Matty's parents are suddenly called to Europe. Matty is left in New York in charge of his aunt.

Next we have Matty at Oyster Bay where his adventure-loving spirit has drawn him to Col. Roosevelt. There is a big crowd on hand. Matty breaks away from his aunt.

the Colonel appears and climbs on to the running-board where the Colonel greets him and in an outburst of enthusiasm, invites the little fellow into his car.

On the day following this we find Matty down town, standing before Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre at 42nd street and Broadway. He earnestly scans the week's bill and then is struck with the idea of going into vaudeville himself. With this in mind he presents himself to Hammerstein, the famous manager, and he tells Matty to be back for the matinee and he will give him a "try-out."

Matty returns to the theatre and gives impersonations of well-known vaudeville and screen favorites, such as Harry Lauder, Ford Sterling and King Baggot, the latter is a scene from his great imp success, "Applaud," and he concludes with an impersonation of Miss Gertrude Hoffman in her celebrated Salome dance. During this dance, his costars enter the theatre and Matty's career as a vaudeville artist comes to an end.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if You Hurt or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day out of it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat is a rich source of uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidney and flush out the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water or before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

REV. ROBERT C. PETERS

Pussy Wants a Corner.
The Republican party is as dry as a bone in Kansas and Maine. In fact, it is avowedly wet in very few states. The Democratic party is dry over practically the entire South, and nationally it is colored far more by Daniels, Houston, Lane, Sheppard, Hobson, and semi-dry like Wilson and Bryan, than it is by the old Taggart-Murphy crowd. The Bull Moosers in Iowa have just come out for prohibition, state and national. In Ohio they are dry, and in nearly every other state they are suspected of dry leanings.
In Idaho every party except the Socialists has fore sworn the company of the old Red-Eye.
Heretofore the Republicans in Pennsylvania, and the Democrats in Maine have been considered absolutely free from the dry heresy. Nevertheless, Dr. Brumbaugh, Republican candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, is as dry as Penrose, the candidate for senator, is wet, and the Portland (Maine) Express-Advertiser calls attention to the fact that there are thousands of Democrats in Maine who are openly at war with the previous attitude of that party on the liquor question.
J. Barleycorn wants a political corner, and he wants it badly.

TROUBLE IN NASHVILLE.

Nuisance Law is Being Used With Admirable Effect.
Judge George N. Tillman, of the Circuit Court, has granted injunction against 67 places in the city of Nashville where liquor has been sold.
Judge Tillman's action placed the cap sheet of success upon the long effort of Governor Hopper to enforce the prohibition law in the state of Tennessee.
The nuisance law operates as an injunction, not only upon the person who has been caught selling liquor,

MATRIMONIAL

A very pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday at eight o'clock at the rectory of St. Mark's church, Altoona, by Rev. Father Egan, when Miss Catherine Agnes Dugan, formerly of Osceola Mills, but now of East Altoona, became the bride of Herman Webber, of East Altoona. They were attended by Mr. Francis Bradley as groomsmen and Miss Agnes Tully as bridesmaid, both of Altoona. The bridegroom is employed in the Fourth street freight shop, Altoona, while the bride is a charming young lady who has a host of friends who wish her every success in her new life. Immediately following the wedding ceremony they departed on their honeymoon trip to Philadelphia, Atlantic City and New York. After Aug. 22, they will be at home to their friends at the home of the bridegroom in East Altoona.

THEY TRIED BRIBERY

Wets Wanted Washington Prohibition Petition Lost.
The Washington prohibition initiative petition, containing 112,101 names more than three times the required number to insure a vote per state-wide, was gotten safely into the Secretary of State's office, in spite of the fact that persistent efforts were made for six weeks to destroy the petition. Mr. Geo. D. Conger asserts that great sums of money were offered various ones for an opportunity to get at the list of names. The Washington law prevents the same person from signing two such petitions, and so if once destroyed, it would be almost impossible to duplicate the great list. Mr. Conger declared that, in one instance, a large sum of money was placed in the open with a proffered agreement that he was to get 50 per cent down and the balance when the petition was destroyed, and he also asserted that various members of his office force were approached with tempting offers.

Oregon Petition is Whopper.

The petition which calls for a vote on state-wide prohibition in Oregon has just been filed. It shows 35,032 names, and is a record-breaker. The proposed amendment reads: "Article I of the constitution of the State of Oregon shall be and hereby is amended by adding thereto the following section, which shall be designated section 36, of article I: "Section 36. From and after January 1, 1916, no intoxicating liquors shall be manufactured or sold within this state, except for medicinal purposes, upon prescription of a licensed physician, or for scientific, sacramental or mechanical purposes. "This act is self-executing and all provisions of the constitution and all laws of this state and of the charters and ordinances of all cities, towns and other municipalities therein, in conflict with the provisions of this section, are hereby repealed. "If the amendment is approved by the people the 'home rule law' is automatically repealed and the state will become 'dry' January 1, 1916."

ARGUMENT IN THE LICENSE HEARING

The hotel men and their witnesses stated that they kept their hotels open until a late hour to accommodate travelers on the night train. They did not know of any other places being kept open for the accommodation of travelers who arrived in town late at night.

Witnesses for the remonstrants stated that there is seldom anybody on the night train except a few drunks returning from Clearfield.

In his argument Mr. Forsyth said there is necessity for hotel licenses in Curwensville. He said that the witnesses for the hotel men represented eight-tenths of the business interests of the town. He said there are times when from ten to fifteen traveling men arrived in town in one day and that they have no suitable place in which to display the line of goods they carry; that there are no bath rooms, laundry or other accommodations in the private houses open to travelers. He declared that the necessity for licensed hotels was not a moral or physical, but a legal question.

Mr. Swoope took the view that a majority of the people of Curwensville are opposed to license on the ground that license is not necessary that the town's conditions have been greatly improved since the hotel bars have been closed; that there is ample accommodation in the homes of citizens for the travelers who remain in the town over night, and that the best element of the town is opposed to license.

At the conclusion of the argument Judge Bell requested that a statement of the number of arrests before and after the closing of the bars be submitted to him at an early date.

FINELT PICNIC OF THE SEASON

Judge Bell Delivers Address—Prizes Were Won by the Young Folks in Several Contests—Fat Man's Race Won by One of the Town's Prominent Citizens.

The local aerie of Eagles could not have wished for a finer day for their picnic at the Driving park than they had yesterday. The weather was favorable to an event of the kind, and the park was well filled with Eagles and their friends. Everybody had a most enjoyable time.

There were amusements of all kinds. The contests were exciting and the music by the High School band was exhilarating.

In the motorcycle race John P. Smith won first prize, with Ralph Jordan a close second and Francis Thompson third.

About forty little boys engaged in the peanut race, and the spectacle was one that brought forth the hearty laughs of the crowd.

The address of Judge Singleton Bell in the afternoon, was a very able effort. The judge spoke of fraternal organizations and said that through these the people of a town were brought into closer relations, and that when properly conducted, as the Eagles are, an order was beneficial to any community. Burgess Callan introduced Judge Bell, and the latter was listened to with marked attention by the picnicers.

LONG STRIKE AT CRESSON IS ENDED BY THE PENNSY

Cresson Strike Ended.

Cresson people breathed a sigh of relief Tuesday when the Pennsylvania railroad hauled out of the yards at that place the two big cars which for almost a half year have served as headquarters for strikebreakers. The action of the Pennsy is taken to mean that the strike of the trackmen is at an end. Reports are that the company has decided to hire some of the men who were among the strikers when the outbreak occurred early in the year.

Although there had been no serious trouble, the sight of the strike breakers' cars caused an air of dissatisfaction among the employees at Cresson.

When the strike broke out the company sent a large force of workmen to Cresson to do the work of the men who had left their jobs.

The two big cars had been equipped with bunks, cook stoves and other things and with big stores of food.

The Pennsy has been quietly and gradually withdrawing these strike breakers and has been engaging new workmen.

Telephoning On Trains.

In the recent test of the Erie's gigantic centipede locomotive, the Matt H. Shay, it was necessary to make use of the telephone to get the train properly started, the weight exclusive of the locomotive being 17,912 tons. To avoid the pulling out of drawbars in starting, pushing locomotives were used to assist the train in getting under way. The total length of the train was 8,500 feet, or about 1.6 miles. Telephonic communication was maintained between the front and rear ends of the train to coordinate the efforts of the pushing locomotives in starting. For length and weight of the train the test establishes a world's record. The average drawbar pull for the run was about 100,000 pounds.

Electrification is Halted.

Work has been stopped on the electrification work of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, near Butte, Mont., because of demands of labor. It is said to be a question if the work will resume at an early date at the workers demanded five dollars for a day of eight hours and there was raised the question of the right of the electrical workers to set poles for the transportation lines. The railway company refused to treat with labor organizations not actually in the employ of the company. Considerable progress had been made with the electrification of the first unit.

Coming Changes in Hairdressing Styles

HAIR brims are growing wider and modistes foretell a vogue for large hats, to begin with the fall season. Large hats and small, simple coiffures do not harmonize, and already the light puff for flaring out the coiffure has made its appearance. We have also to consider small hair rolls or pads for supporting the hair, and coiffures are quite generally dressed in waves. These are the wavelets that are breaking upon a new shore-line in hairdressing, speaking figuratively; they are foretelling a rising tide of favor for more display in the management of the hair. The coiffure shown here pictures the hair parted at one side and waved in smooth, regular undulations. There is a short lock at the front arranged in a light curl. Some of the new styles show two very precise ringlets, one on each side of a middle part. For this style the hair is also waved, but more loosely, and the coil is arranged lower on the neck.

Long, light puffs help out in building up a coiffure and a few of them, arranged about a coil, make the new styles easy to accomplish. The coiffure arranged on top of the head, with the hair combed back from the face is liked by the younger women. Only a few curls about the face relieve the plainness of this style, but a mass of hair piled on top of the head makes a piquant arrangement suited to youthful faces.

Puffs and short curls are becoming to everyone and look as well on grand-mama as on her daughter and daughter's daughter. They are most successful when made separately and planned on, for they can be easily dressed and placed wherever needed. There is no very good reason why one should not borrow the charm that belongs to them unless a prejudice against wearing separate pieces of hair can be construed as reasonable.

UMPIRE BAITING HAS NOT BEEN STOPPED BY PLAYERS

BY FRANG G. MENKE.
(By International News Service.)

New York, Aug. 14.—Chris Mathewson, the author pitcher, in a recent article stating this was an easy year for umpires, remarked that even his boss, John McGraw, was "off" the arbiters this year, and that John was acting real polite and refined in his attitude toward the umpires.

Quite a number of persons will be surprised to hear this. Among those will be one John McGraw, sometimes called "Muggsy" McGraw and at other times "Hit-from-behind" McGraw. Some National league umpires will be surprised, too. To the best of their recollection, they have had to chase John from the pastime just about as often this year as ever before. And that means they've done some considerable chasing.

Perhaps what Chris meant to impart to the multitude was that John doesn't say as much to the umpires as he used to say in the dear old days that are dead. There may be some truth in that. The umpires in late years have come to know John. Just as soon as they declare a Giant out or the other fellow safe, they look toward John. If they notice that he is about to open his mouth they can anticipate what is coming—to them. So they just wave John from the pasture and thus save their feelings from injury by the harsh, cruel words that John can concoct at a moment's notice.

If the article that Chris wrote merely mentioned John's name as a party who no longer heckles the umpires one might have gained the idea that Chris wrote that article just to get a stand in with his boss. But Chris didn't stop with lauding John as a reformed umpire-baiter. He mentioned the names of Clarke Griffith, the peppery leader of the Senators and Frank Chance, the Yankee manager. He declared that "like McGraw," they no longer cause trouble for the umpires.

Griff is "off" the umpires—when police are around. At other times—well, read the dispatches from the different towns where the Senators stage their ball games—and where Griff stages his little act: "taming the Umpire."

It wasn't so very long ago that Griff showed how thoroughly he has his temper under control by forfeiting game in Philadelphia because he objected to some of the rulings by an Umpire named Chilli. And it wasn't so long ago that Griff and almost his entire team got mixed up in a few doings in Detroit. It was, so very long ago that Connie Mack, the peacable Quaker City resident declared that because of Griffith's actions on a ball field and his conduct toward umpires that "Griffith ought to be driven out of baseball."

As to Frank Chance, Chris may be partially right. Whether Chance has reformed is a question. But it's true that he hasn't been shooed off the field as often as he used to be. Among some of the reasons for this are that he hasn't been on the field as regularly as in the old days and that he's now leading a way down second division club. The Yanks, when they get their beatings, usually get such decisive ones that there is no question about it—and little chance to blame it on the umpire. An umpire can be blamed for many things but you can't blame him because the other fellow coaxed out a triple with the bases loaded. You can't blame him when your fielder muffs a fly ball, nor can you blame him when your club fails to hit or fails to field and your pitchers fail to pitch.

But of course, you can blame the umpire once in a while. When chance presents itself Chance presents himself and diligently pursues the business of blaming the umpire. Added years haven't taken the sting from his speech, and that's one of the reasons why Chance, in ratio to protests, has been chased just as often this year as he was in the old Cub days.

Good evening! Well, if you don't get that trip to Europe you probably have a receipted bill from your grocer.

It's a wise man who can get away with some other fellow's umbrella without being detected.

If the pumpkin does not hurry up it will be in no condition to withstand the visitation of Jack Frost.

Ridicule has worked many reforms in man's habits, but ridicule has no effect on the cigarette smoker.

Those improvement bonds offered by the borough might sell like hot corn on the cob if they were disguised as gold mine stock.

A true Christian is a man who does not swear when he strikes at an exasperating fly and upssets the ink bottle over his manuscript.

No, Genevieve; the triple entente is not a new French dance, as you suppose, but a combination of European powers who are making Madame Europe do the dancing.

Somebody who has time might figure out how much the state and county will eventually pay to prove or fail to prove that the deer killed by Dr. Dickinson had horns visible above the hair.

A "distinguished scientist" says the kaiser is not responsible for plunging seven nations of Europe in war. But history will record that if the kaiser had not been hot for war there would be peace in Europe today.

INVASION OF PENNSYLVANIA.
So long has Special Privilege been entrenched in Pennsylvania that it regards its position as impregnable. Having entered into an alliance with the Republican and Democratic parties Special Privilege has gradually but surely deprived the people of their right to self-government; has fattened on the spoils of office, and has sought to make perpetual its power to oppress the people. This triple alliance is about to be ousted from power, and the people will again come into their own.

Insolent and arrogant as the triple alliance is it fears those who speak the truth. In past years the triple alliance has been able to allay the suspicions of the people by pretending to be fair and honest. But the founding of the Washington party and the dissemination of facts and figures proving that the triple alliance has robbed the people of their money and their rights have caused the component parts of the alliance to realize that it can no longer fool the people.

Strongly entrenched as it is, Special Privilege—the Penrose machine, the Democratic machine and the beneficiaries of the activities of these two machines—dreads the invasion of Pennsylvania by Colonel Roosevelt, the leader of the party of progressivism, honest government and social and industrial justice. Colonel Roosevelt is coming into this state for the purpose of bombarding the triple alliance with the truth, and the hot shot he will pour into the ranks of the enemy will cause them to regard surrender as the wisest policy, especially as Colonel Roosevelt has an army of determined voters behind him, all of whom believe that it is time that the state is rid of its discredited political pirates.

PURE LAWLESSNESS.

The automobile as a means to pleasure or profit has come to stay. There are over one hundred thousand motor driven cars in Pennsylvania. Unfortunately some of these cars are owned and driven by people who have no more right to have such a dangerous machine in their control than a four-weeks' old baby. These are the people who disregard both the law and the rights of other people. These are the people who run down pedestrians—and then escape by running their cars at a high speed that their numbers cannot be taken. The person who runs their motor cars in defiance of law and common sense bring discredit upon the careful drivers. There are a few of these reckless, insolent motorists in Clearfield, and one of them Thursday afternoon ran into another car on Third street, near Pine, doing considerable damage to the other car. Instead of stopping to inquire into the case this careless driver proceed on the way as unconcerned as if running other people down were an every day occurrence.

It would be to the interest of all motorists if drivers such as this one were taken into court and punished for recklessness. But it would be much more beneficial to everybody if the legislature were to prohibit the running of motor cars by thoughtless persons of either sex. Those men and women who have no respect for the rights and property of others should not have placed in their control machines which at best are dangerous even in the hands of the most careful drivers. To run a motor car over a pedestrian or into another car and then put on speed and disappear should be made a crime punishable with a heavy fine and imprisonment.

Potato Culture.

You know, madam, said the seedsman, you don't have to plant your potatoes whole; you can cut them up in small pieces.

Yes, I know, said Mrs. Newwife, that might do very well if we always wanted to raise potatoes for Lyonnaise or for mashing, but we should probably desire to have potatoes served whole now and then.

Precious Relics

Discussing a popular novel of little worth a well-known critic says
The pathos of the book is really pathetic. It reminds me of a widow

The good woman was about to sell her household furniture, her rugs, plated ware and what not. As she was going over these articles her eyes filled with tears, a host of memories rose to her mind and, laying aside a half-dozen knives, she said:
Oh dear, I can't let these go. They've been in poor George's mouth too often.

The table was spread with the farmer's best,
With many good thing for each city guest,
And one of them said as he tasted the peas:

"How deliciously sweet and good are these;
When fresh from the garden and out of the pod,
How much better they are, it's certainly odd."

And he didn't know 'twas the country air,
That gave those peas their flavor so rare.
When the farmer's wife heard his praise she grinned,
For the pod from which they came was tinned.

The fat man's race was won by W. H. Spencer, the Royal Quality flour man, who received a box of chocolates. The first prize in the little girls' foot race was won by Rebecca Dougherty and the second prize was won by Miss Margaret McDonald, and Francis Butler won the bicycle race. In the girls' egg race Rebecca Dougherty came in first and Margaret McDonald second.

A game of baseball was played by the East End All-Star team and the strong West Side team, the All-Stars winning by a score of 9 to 0. Despite the one-sided score, the game was a good one and was heartily enjoyed. The batteries were: East End, P. Roschery, Lester. West Side, Fauver, Fletcher, Pool and Campbell.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS ARE PROVING VERY POPULAR

The public playground was recently opened in Witmer park with 150 children present. Since then it has been well attended when the weather has been good. The apparatus has not yet arrived, but is expected to be here soon. Just now Misses Alta Boyce and Mildred Deitzel, the girls who have charge of the playground, are entertaining the children by teaching them games and telling stories. The play ground is open to all on every day except Sundays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Wednesday is girls' day. On this day they are taught to sew, using simple stitches. The girls are working on patches now, which will be used to make a quilt when they are all finished. Each Wednesday the little girl who makes the neatest stitches is given a small prize. Thursday is boys' day when sports which the boys like best are indulged in and base ball games played. Children from all parts of the town are extended a welcome to come and enjoy the good times that are in store for them every afternoon at the lower Witmer park.

The town council appropriated $150 to be used in buying apparatus and the best judgment of those who had the matter in charge has been used in choosing it. When this apparatus arrives the playground will be even more interesting than it is now. For what child does not love a swing, or a sliding board?

The Woman's club has been very fortunate in securing Miss Boyce and Miss Deitzer to take charge of the playground.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur. When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy of any drug store the ready-made tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Restorer". You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking only small strands at a time. By continuing all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and lustrous. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray faded hair though no longer is a sign of old age, and so we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

It's pleasing to take—The Daily Progress.

BELGIANS ELATED BY THEIR VICTORY

Suffered Serious Setbacks.

Large German forces, vanguards on the right flank of the 1,000,000 men army the kaiser has lined up for nearly 200 miles in battle formation, in Belgium and Luxembourg, suffered serious setbacks Wednesday and yesterday at the hands of the Belgians, according to official announcement last night.

German troops from the Liege district Wednesday moved on Haelen, a town four miles southeast of Driest, but were driven back with heavy losses.

Belgians Took Defensive.

Yesterday the Belgians, assuming the offensive, started after the retreating Germans, and advices last night indicate that the rout of the enemy's division is complete.

An official communication yesterday also said that a large German force, proceeding in the direction of Eghezee to the north of Namur, the fortified city, was attacked and repulsed yesterday morning by the Belgian troops. The Germans suffered severe casualties. The Belgians captured machine guns mounted on motorcars.

Not in Contact With Allies.

No mention is made of the participation of French and British forces in yesterday's battles, from which it would appear that the Germans have not yet come in contact with the main allied army of defense, supposed to be gathering at Namur. The tactics of the Germans indicate they are trying to get into contact with the allied army, the position of which is hidden.

Commenting on yesterday's movements, the war ministry says:

"The Belgian cavalry division this morning took up the offensive against the Germans, who were defeated in yesterday's battle of Haelen, with the object, it is believed, of picking up the dead and wounded and collecting the abandoned material of war."

"No German surprise was expected, and there are no reasons to fear and German cavalry movement on Brussels from the south, all roads leading to the capital being guarded by the Belgian army and the civic guard."

Germans Outnumbered Belgians

Germans engaged in the battle of Haelen according to late details received here, numbered more than 10,000, composed of cavalry, artillery and a small force of infantry. The Belgian force numbered about 7000.

"It is believed," says the dispatch from the front, "that the object of the Germans was to take a position north of the Et. Trond road at Tirlemont, from which they would be able to execute a turning movement on the Belgian army."

"Through efficient cavalry reconnaissance, the Belgian commander obtained accurate information of the movement of the attacking force. To reach Diest the Germans had to cross the river at Haelen, and it was before this place that the Belgians took up their principal position, erecting baricades, building entrenchment and placing guns where they could be most effectively employed."

German Fire Had Little Effect.

"The Germans came in sight about 11 o'clock in the morning, and soon after that the artillery on both sides came into action. The German fire had little effect. The Belgian fire was deadly, even at a range of 2000 meters, and played havoc with the German cavalry, which, notwithstanding, continued to advance."

The Belgian cavalry repeatedly charged, but owing to the conformation of the country, which is intersected with hedges and hillocks, could attack only in small groups. The Germans again and again hurled themselves at the baricades, only to be shot down by the deadly Belgian fire.

German Defeat Was Complete.

The attack on the bridges spanning the river was equally fierce. German officers could be seen urging their men to the attack, to meet almost certain death from the Belgian guns. Men and horses fell like flies, until, when almost shattered, the order for retreat was given at 6 o'clock in the evening.

The German defeat was complete, their loss reaching more than 1000, and they retired in the greatest disorder. At nightfall they were making their way hastily towards Tongres.

Many Germans Were Killed.

Upwards of 200 dead German soldiers were counted in a space of fifty yards square. A church, a brewery and some houses in Haelen were set afire and two bridges over the Demer were destroyed by Belgian engineers. Great quantities of booty were collected on the battlefield and this has been stacked in front of the town hall of Diest. Many horses also were captured.

The German troops in other parts of Belgium are understood to be gathering in all the railroad cars they can find. A passenger train near Warminnes was halted by a German cavalry patrol and the passengers left in the open country, the train, with its engineer, being taken toward the German lines.

When they had gone 30 feet Mr. Merritt said that he must go back for some peanuts, and he went back, the others going on toward the station. Luzier picked up Merritt's suitcase when Merritt returned to the restaurant. Merritt was gone only a few minutes, but when he returned Mr. Luzier could not see that he had any peanuts. Mr. Merritt and Mr. Luzier got on the train and they heard the fire whistle blow about three minutes after the train started. Mr. Luzier testified that he had noticed no light before the train left.

Rooms Were Ablaze.

Harvey Barger, of Woodland, who is also a restaurant keeper, was the next witness. Very soon after the train left some one gave the fire alarm. He followed and saw that Merritt's restaurant was afire. He took a sign board and broke open the front door, which was locked. He saw that the flames were shooting up over a partition that divided the front part of the restaurant from the part where the cooking was done. Without stopping to investigate, Mr. Barger went out and got two buckets and filled them at the nearby pump. By the time he came back the fire had spread so rapidly that he could not throw the water on the base of the fire, and the room was so filled with the darting flames that he could not enter.

Mr. Barger's residence was about eight feet from the restaurant, on one side, although the outside stairs of his house were only three feet from the restaurant.

Merritt Returned.

A. D. 1914, also a resident of Woodland, was next called to the stand. Mr. McClure, a neighbor, first notified him of the fire in Mr. Merritt's restaurant directly opposite his home, just after the train had pulled out for Clearfield. He called the lower works and told them and had the fire alarm blown, then he took out his car and some things from the front of his own house, but did not go over to Mr. Merritt's restaurant. The fire spread so rapidly that Mr. Powell's household had to leave the house by the back way.

Mr. Powell testified that he saw Mr. Merritt leave the store with the boys and then come back for a few minutes but he did not notice any light in the store until he was called. The restaurant was lighted by electric light, but Mr. Merritt did not turn it on when he went back to the store.

His Wife Smelled Fire.

C. C. McClure, the shipping clerk at the Woodland brick works, testified that he lived in the house next to the restaurant; that he was sleeping when he was awakened by the nurse and told that his wife who was sick in bed, had smelled fire. He went down and saw where the fire was and got water to pour on it. When the water was poured on the fire, it suddenly spread over the ceiling. The fire was coming from behind the partition and the flame was blue. Mr. McClure stated that Mr. Merritt knew the serious condition of his wife. He then went back to his wife assured her that there was no cause for alarm, but as the fire spread so rapidly they carried her out of the house. In a few minutes after the fire started the restaurant was in a blaze.

Lloyd Luzier was recalled and testified that it was no more than ten minutes from the time they left the restaurant until the fire whistle blew.

Was Building Another House.

Alex Dugan, of Woodland, testified that he owned the building occupied by Mr. Merritt as a restaurant, and that Merritt had leased it for a year. Mr. Dugan could not state, but he thought that the year was almost over. Mr. Merritt had laid the foundations for a building nearer the station, but had remarked a few days before that he believed he would have to close up the work until spring as he could not finance it now because he could not collect some money he had out. He also said that he would be willing to pay good interest on money if he could borrow but he did not ask to borrow it of Mr. Dugan.

Brief arguments for and against the accused were heard and was placed in the custody of the sheriff. Bail may be procured for his release until the September term of court.

There is also a fine swimming hole, which is enjoyed by many, and the camp life in the evening is an attraction not to be missed.

The entertainment which made a "hit" this year was the masquerade, in which everybody took part.

Camp Bo Narr is a place of rest and social enjoyment.

Good Morning! Was Your Coffee Good This Morning?

Perhaps the Coffee was all right but was not properly ground. It makes a lot of difference how it is prepared. That's why we have installed a new model ROBERT ELECTRIC COFFEE MILL to give our trade better service. We could not buy better Coffee but we found a way to make a big improvement in the grinding. This new mill will Grind just as fine or coarse as anybody may want it. And it will PULVERIZE just right for a Drip Pot. And it is a pleasure for our clerks to give you just what you want—while you wait, if you desire.

Let us show you "HOW MUCH BETTER," we can serve you.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

(Copyright by Harold MacGrath)

Kathlyn gazed sadly at her father. Treasure, treasure, that first she was beginning to hate the very sound of the word. The colonel had been nervous, impatient, and irritable ever since the document had been discovered. Till recently Kathlyn had always believed her father to be perfect, but now she saw that he was human, he had his flaws and spot. Treasure! Before her or Winnie! So be it.

"Colonel," said Bruce, taking a chance throw, "we are less than a hundred miles from the seaport. Suppose we let Umballa clear out and we ourselves head straight up the coast? It is not fair to the women to put them to any further hardship."

"Bruce, I have sworn to God that Umballa shall not have that treasure. Ramabal, do you understand what it will mean to you if he succeeds in reaching Allaha with that treasure, probably millions? He will be able to buy every priest and soldier in Allaha and still have enough left for any extravagance that he may wish to plunge in."

"Sahib," suggested Ramabal, "let us send the women to the seaport in care of Ahmed, while we men seek Umballa."

"Good!" Bruce struck his hands together. "The very thing."

"I refuse to be separated from father," declared Kathlyn. "If he is determined to pursue Umballa back to Allaha, I must accompany him."

"And I!" added Winnie.

"Nothing more to be said," and Bruce signed to the boatmen to start. "If only this breeze had not come up! We could have caught him before he made shore."

Umballa paced the deck of the sloop thinking and planning. He saw his enemies leaving in the rescued boats. Had he delayed them long enough? As matters stood, he could not carry away the treasure. He must have help. An armed force of men he could trust. On the mainland were Ahmed and the loyal keepers behind were three men who wanted his life as he wanted theirs. The only hope he had lay in the cupidity of the men on the sloop. If they could be made to stand by him, there was a fair chance. Once he was of a mind to leave the basket over the rail and trust to luck in finding it again. But the thought tore at his heart. He simply could not do it. Perhaps he could start a revolt, or win over the chief of the village. He had known honest men to fall at the sight of gold, to fight for it to commit any crime for it—and, if need be, to die for it. But the chief was with his enemies. Finally he came to the conclusion that the only thing to be done was to carry the treasure directly into the chief's hut and there await him. He would bribe the men with him sufficiently to close their mouths. He would wait on the shore the game was up. But he swept the mainland with his gaze and discovered no sign of him.

As a matter of fact, Ahmed had arranged his elephants so that they could start at once up the coast to the seaport. He was waiting on the native highway for the return of his master quite confident that he would bring the bothersome trinkets with him. He knew nothing of Umballa's exploit. The appalling thunder of the explosions worried him. He would wait for just so long then he would go and seek.

"Where Have You Hidden It?" Demanded the Chief.

Every village chief has his successor in hope. This individual was one of those who had helped Umballa to carry the treasure from the cave in fact the man who had guided him to the cave itself. He spoke to Umballa. He said that he understood the holy ones' plight for to these yet simple and village folk Umballa was still the holiest one. Their religion was the same.

Umballa, he said, "we can beat your enemies who follow." "How," eagerly.

"Yonder is the chief's bullock cart. I myself will find the bullocks."

"What then?"

"We shall be on the way south before the others land."

"An extra handful of gold for you! Get the oars out! Let us hurry!"

"More, holy one, these men, will obey me."

"They shall all be well paid."

Umballa had reached the point where he could not plan without treachery. He proposed to carry the basket into the jungle somewhere, bury it and make way with every man who knew the secret. Then, at the proper time, he would return for it with a brave caravan his own men or those whose loyalty he could repurchase.

The landing was made, the basket conveyed to the bullock cart, which was emptied of its bait and leopard trap. The bullocks were brought out and harnessed—all this activity before the fishing boats had covered half the distance.

"I see light," murmured Umballa.

He tried to act coolly, but when he spoke his voice cracked and the blood in his throat high suffocated him.

"Sand, holy one!"

"Well, what of sand?"

"You can dig and cover up things in sand and no one can possibly tell. The sand tells nothing."

They drove the bullocks forward mercifully till they came to what Umballa considered a suitable spot. A pit was dug, but not before Umballa had taken from the basket enough gold to set the men wild. They were his. He smiled inwardly to think how easily they could have had all of it. They were still honest.

The sand was smoothed down over the basket. It would not have been possible for the human eye to discover the spot without a perfect range. Umballa drove down a broken stick directly over where the basket lay. He had beaten them; they would find nothing. Now to rid himself of these simple fools who trusted him. The man who longed to become the chief's successor was then played upon by Umballa. To set the two factions at each other's throat, a perfect elimination. Umballa advised him to rouse his friends, a chief that the white people had taken the gold away from the holy man to whom it belonged as agent.

Thus in this peaceful fishermen's village began the game of gold and politics for the two are inseparable. Umballa in hiding watched the contest gleefully. He witnessed the rival approach his chief, saw the angry gestures exchanged and knew that dissension had begun. The men of the village clustered about.

"Where have you hidden it?" demanded the chief. "It belongs to the sahib."

"Hidden what?"

"The treasure you and the false holy one took from the forbidden cave."

"False holy one?"

"Ay wretch! He is Durga Ram, the man who murdered the king of Allaha."

The mutineer laughed and waved his hand toward the smoking ruins of the promontory.

"Look for it there," he said, under mountains of rock and dirt and sand. "Look for it there! And who is this white man who says the holy one is false?"

"I say it you scoundrel!" cried the colonel, advancing, but Bruce restrained him, saying that the situation was too important and sinister to trust to a momentary and sinister trial.

"But he is just a little diplomacy," he urged.

"But the men are—"

That may be but just at present there seem to be more men standing back of him than back of our chief here. We have no way of getting a warning to Ahmed. Wait!

Jack I spoke the chief wrathfully, thou best!

Ah! thou has grown too fat with rule.

Ah! cried the men back of the mutinous one.

Sahib, said the chief, without losing any of his natural dignity, the man has betrayed me. I see the lust of gold in their eyes. Evil presage. But you have saved the life of my child and mine and I will throw my strength with you.

Father can't you see? asked Kathlyn.

See what?

The inevitable. It was in my heart all the way here that we should meet with disaster. There is yet time to leave here peacefully.

But her pleading fell upon the ears of a man who was treasure mad. He would not listen to reason. Ahmed could have told Kathlyn that the old king stood back of her father pushing.

He is dead, whispered Bruce, but what of it leave him.

What would I do without you John?

From down the beach the chief's little group came toddling to the group of excited men. She was clutching some thing in her hand. Her father took her by the arm and pulled her back to him. Kathlyn put her hand upon the child's head protectively. The child gazed up shyly, opened her little hand and disclosed a yellow sovereign.

The argument between the chief and his mutinous followers went on.

"John," said Kathlyn, you speak the dialect. I can understand only a word here and there. But listen. Tell the chief that all we desire is to be permitted to depart in peace later," she added, significantly.

"What's up?"

"The child has a coin—a British sovereign—in her hand. She knows where Umballa has secreted the treasure. Since father cannot be budged from his purpose let us try deceit. You speak to the chief while I explain to father."

To the chief Bruce said, "The treasure is evidently lost. So after a short rest we shall return to our caravan and depart. We do not wish to be the cause of trouble between you and your people."

"But, sahib, they have the gold!"

"The false holy one doubtless gave them that before the explosion." Bruce laid hold of his arm in a friendly fashion, apparently, but in reality as a warning. "All we want is a slight rest in your house. After that we shall proceed upon our journey."

The mutineers could offer no reasonable objections to this and signified that it was all one to them so long as the white people departed. They had caused enough damage by their appearance and it might be that it was through their agency that the promontory was all but destroyed. The fish would be driven away for weeks and what would the fierce gun runners say when they found out that their stores had gone up in flame and smoke? At all! What would they do but bet them and tempt them for permanent gain to enter the cave?

When these men came, answered the chief with a dry smile. I will deal with them. None of us has entered the cave. They know me for a man of truth. Perhaps you are right. He added to the mutineer. "There could not have been a treasure there and escape the sharp eyes of those Arabs. Go back to your homes. These white people will be my guests till they have rested and are ready to depart."

John, with the men dispersed and from him Kathlyn placed Kathlyn saw in other of his senses fall into place. They would be no fight as long for the present. The men indeed had hoped to come to actual warfare but they could not force war on their chief without some good cause. After all the sooner the white people were out of the way the better for all concerned.

Did the leader of this open mutiny have ulterior designs upon the treasure upon the life of Umballa? Perhaps. At any rate, events so shaped themselves as to nullify whatever plans he had formed in his gold-dazzled brain.

The colonel was tractable and fell in with Kathlyn's idea. It would have been nothing short of foolhardiness to have openly antagonized the rebellious men.

You have a plan, Kit, but what is it?"

I dare not tell you here. You are too excited. But I believe I can lead you to where Umballa has buried the basket. I feel that Umballa is watching every move we make. And I dare say he hoped—and even instigated—this mutiny to end in disaster for us. He is alone. So much we can rely upon. But if we try to meet him openly we shall lose. Patience for a little while. There, they are leaving us. They are grumbling but I do not believe that means anything serious.

Now then white people said the chief, come to my house. You are welcome there now and always. You have this day saved my life and that of my child. I am grateful.

Inside the hut Kathlyn drew the child toward her and gently pressed open the tightly-clutched fingers. She plucked the sovereign from the little pink palm and held it up. The child's father seized it wonderingly.

"Gold! They had to me? I knew it!"

Yes, said Bruce. They did find the treasure. They brought it here and buried it quickly. And we believe your little girl knows where. Question her."

It was not an easy matter. The child was naturally shy and the presence of all these white-skinned people struck her usually babbling tongue with a species of paralysis. But her father was patient, and word by word the secret was dragged out of her. She told of the stolen bullock cart of the digging in the sand, of the holy one.

In some manner they must lure Umballa from his retreat. It was finally agreed upon that they all return to the camp and steal back at once in a body. They would come sufficiently armed. Later the chief could pretend to be working with his child.

So while Umballa stole forth to his hiding place, reasonably sure that his enemies had gone, Umballa got together his mutineers and made arrangements with them to help him carry away the treasure that night, the right-hand owner of the treasure to the broken stick in the damp sand.

That night when Umballa and his men arrived, a hole in the sand greeted them. It was shaped like a mouth, opened in laughter.

TWO PLEASING PICTURES AT OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT

"Circle 17."

Herman Rawlinson and Anna Little are at their best in this thrilling story of Black hand methods. Plot and counterplot are unfolded, with a charming love story prevailing all.

Professor Bartoli has incurred the enmity of the society. With his daughter he flees to America. As they start to board the steamer, an agent of the society attacks Bartoli and would stab him, but for the timely interference of Capt. Rawdon, U. S. A. That is the beginning of a series of incidents strange and interesting.

It is young Captain Rawdon who, in America, interferes in the plan of the black handers and saves, at the risk of his own life in a terrible fight in a river boat-house, Bartoli's daughter from an awful death.

A year passes. Bartoli has established himself as a music teacher in New York, while Anita has a flower stand on the street. Capt. Rawdon, coming home on furlough to visit his mother and sister.

Reaching his home, Rawdon is welcomed by his family. His mother decides to give a musicale in honor of his homecoming, he shows Bartoli's card with the suggestion that the Italian supply the music. The mother agrees, writes a note, to which Rawdon adds a postscript inviting Anita to attend the musicale.

Bartoli receives the note and writes directions to his daughter to follow him to the Rawdons. He goes out and the Italian agent of Giuseppe Draga, leader of Circle 17, enters and changes the address on Bartoli's note.

In this manner Anita is taken by the society. Bartoli worries that she does not appear at Rawdon's and the Captain at last suggests they time they trace her to a dirty dive and after a hard fight kill the villain and rescue the dark-eyed heroine.

"Universal Boy" No. 2

Matty breaks into vaudeville. Yes, he does a dandy other amusing and extremely interesting things in the second release of the great Universal Boy series, shown this evening at the New opera house. Also he meets several people whose names are known in every corner of the civilized world.

Matty's parents are suddenly called to Europe. Matty is left in New York in charge of his aunt.

Next we have Matty at Oyster Bay where his adventure-loving spirit has drawn him to Col. Roosevelt. There is a big crowd on hand. Matty breaks away from his aunt.

the Colonel appears and climbs on to the running-board where the Colonel greets him and in an outburst of enthusiasm, invites the little fellow into his car.

On the day following this we find Matty down town, standing before Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre at 42nd street and Broadway. He earnestly scans the week's bill and then is struck with the idea of going into vaudeville himself. With this in mind he presents himself to Hammerstein, the famous manager, and he tells Matty to be back for the matinee and he will give him a "try-out."

Matty returns to the theatre and gives impersonations of well-known vaudeville and screen favorites, such as Harry Lauder, Ford Sterling and King Baggot, the latter is a scene from his great imp success, "Applaud," and he concludes with an impersonation of Miss Gertrude Hoffman in her celebrated Salome dance. During this dance, his costars enter the theatre and Matty's career as a vaudeville artist comes to an end.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if You Hurt or Bladder Bothers.

"If you must have your meat every day out of it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a medical authority who tells us that meat is a uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night."

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidney and flush out the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water or before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

TEMPERANCE TIDINGS

REV. ROBERT C. PETERS

Pussy Wants a Corner.
The Republican party is as dry as a bone in Kansas and Maine. In fact, it is avowedly wet in very few states. The Democratic party is dry over practically the entire South, and nationally it is colored far more by Daniels, Houston, Lane, Sheppard, Hobson, and semi-drys like Wilson and Bryan, than it is by the old Taggart-Murphy crowd. The Bull Moosers in Iowa have just come out for prohibition, state and national. In Ohio they are dry, and in nearly every other state they are suspec-ted of dry leanings.
In Idaho every party except the Socialists has fore sworn the com-party of the old Red-Eye.
Heretofore the Republicans in Pennsylvania, and the Democrats in Maine have been considered abso-lutely free from the dry heresy. Nevertheless, Dr. Brumbaugh, Republi-can candidate for governor of Pen-sylvania, is as dry as Penrose, the candidate for senator, is wet, and the Portland (Maine) Express-Ad-vertiser calls attention to the fact that there are thousands of Democrats in Maine who are openly at war with the previous attitude of that party on the liquor question.
J. Barleycorn wants a political corner, and he wants it badly.

TROUBLE IN NASHVILLE.

Nuisance Law is Being Used With Admirable Effect.
Judge George N. Tillman, of the Circuit Court, has granted injunction against 67 places in the city of Nash-ville where liquor has been sold.
Judge Tillman's action placed the cap sheet of success upon the long effort of Governor Hopper to enforce the prohibition law in the state of Tennessee.
The nuisance law operates as an injunction, not only upon the person who has been caught selling liquor,

MATRIMONIAL

A very pretty wedding was solemn-ized Wednesday at eight o'clock at the rectory of St. Mark's church, Altoona, by Rev. Father Egan, when Miss Catherine Agnes Dugan, formerly of Osceola Mills, but now of East Al-toona, became the bride of Herman Webber, of East Altoona. They were attended by Mr. Francis Bradley as groomsmen and Miss Agnes Tully as bridesmaid, both of Altoona. The bridegroom is employed in the Fourth street freight shop, Altoona, while the bride is a charming young lady who has a host of friends who wish her every success in her new life. Im-mediately following the wedding cere-mony they departed on their honey-moon trip to Philadelphia, Atlantic City and New York. After Aug. 22, they will be at home to their friends at the home of the bridegroom in East Altoona.

Wets Wanted Washington Prohibi-tion Petition Lost.
The Washington prohibition initia-tive petition, containing 112,101 names more than three times the required number to insure a vote per state-wide, was gotten safely into the Sec-etary of State's office, in spite of the fact that persistent efforts were made for six weeks to destroy the petition. Mr. Geo. D. Conger asserts that great sums of money were of-fered various ones for an opportunity to get at the list of names. The Wash-ington law prevents the same person from signing two such peti-tions, and so if once destroyed, it would be almost impossible to dupli-cate the great list. Mr. Conger de-clared that, in one instance, a large sum of money was placed in the op-er with a proffered agreement that he was to get 50 per cent down and the balance when the petition was de-stroyed, and he also asserted that various members of his office force were approached with tempting of-fers.

Oregon Petition is Whopper.

The petition which calls for a vote on state-wide prohibition in Oregon has just been filed. It shows 35,032 names, and is a record-breaker.
The proposed amendment reads:
"Article I of the constitution of the State of Oregon shall be and hereby is amended by adding thereto the following section, which shall be de-signated section 36, of article 1.
"Section 36. From and after Janu-ary 1, 1915, no intoxicating liquors shall be manufactured or sold with-in this state, except for medicinal purposes, upon prescription of a lic-ensed physician, or for scientific, sacramental or mechanical purposes.
"This act is self-executing and all provisions of the constitution and all laws of this state and of the char-ters and ordinances of all cities, towns and other municipalities there-in, in conflict with the provisions of this section, are hereby repealed.
"If the amendment is approved by the people the 'home rule law' is automatically repealed and the state will become 'dry' January 1, 1916."

The Real Battlefield

Here the battle of life and death is fought to its bitter end. This is the battle without hope. No drum is beating, no trumpets sounding on this battle-field. The man is away—sent, he knows not why, to be murdered. The woman and the children are left to fight against starvation and death. This is the Real war and millions are enrolling in it.

The hotel men and their witnesses stated that they kept their hotels open until a late hour to accommodate travelers on the night train. They did not know of any other places being kept open for the accommodation of travelers who arrived in town late at night.

Witnesses for the remonstrants stated that there is seldom anybody on the night train except a few drunks returning from Clearfield.

In his argument Mr. Forsyth said there is necessity for hotel licenses in Curwensville. He said that the witnesses for the hotel men represented eight-tenths of the business interests of the town. He said there are times when from ten to fifteen traveling men arrived in town in one day and that they have no suitable place in which to display the line of goods they carry; that there are no bath rooms, laundry or other accommodations in the private houses open to travelers. He declared that the necessity for licensed hotels was not a moral or physical, but a legal question.

Mr. Swoope took the view that a majority of the people of Curwensville are opposed to license on the ground that license is not necessary that the town's conditions have been greatly improved since the hotel bars have been closed; that there is ample accommodation in the homes of citizens for the travelers who remain in the town over night, and that the best element of the town is opposed to license.

At the conclusion of the argument Judge Bell requested that a statement of the number of arrests before and after the closing of the bars be submitted to him at an early date.
